And that was the best post I had ever had on my blog. It had about five comments and I checked it out and it was from a person who I don't know. It was two nights later and I was back in the same position, alone, with no friends and no phone. I was really stressed out. Two days later, I got a new post on my blog about a girl who was supposed to be my friend. She asked me to do something and I told her that I would check it out but didn't get around to it. She was a sweet girl. I wasn't really interested in her, to be honest. So it didn't matter that she wanted to hang out. She wanted to hang out with me. She texted me, and I didn't respond. I really don't know why I didn't respond to her texts. The only thing I can say is that I had a very low self-esteem, and I just didn't care. I thought, 'I have a blog. I can't just text my friends, can I?' She was in class when I got the new post. I checked the text she sent me because I thought I was just being ignored. It was a really long text about how she had a nice day and a day like that was a good sign. It was a really sweet text, and it just made me cry. I didn't respond. She got the point. I thought I was being ignored but was more likely that I didn't have the strength to reply. She probably went to her friends who hung out with her and told them about me, thinking I was being an a-hole. I checked my 2d92ce491b
