My app will be the center point for such posts and requests. I want to implement this system where users can post while they are on wifi, and when they are offline the app has the option of "pulling" the post. I am kind of confused as to how to implement this and would appreciate any help or examples. Thanks! A: The two main ways to go about this are to poll for updates on user's activities, or have a background service that has access to the database that checks periodically for the latest activities. Polling for updates You can find many articles about polling for updates and here is a good one on how to do this in an elegant way. Polling a database You can also use the SQLiteDatabase class to listen for changes and keep your database up to date with the changes. With regards to what to do when the user is offline, you might want to think of providing a fallback mechanism if the user loses connection for a very long time.
