g9pBdwVVfdpk.Ud2Pqy.NX0QdKw6Y4HtlM10.“The “A” with an apostrophe, that sounds like “Abstinence,” doesn’t it? Well it’s not an apostrophe, it’s a deliberate upper-case “A” with a diacritic that’s called a “diacresis” or a “umlaut.” A diacresis has a particular shape. It’s like a little “u” sitting there, and when you combine two letters that have a diacresis, like this “A,” it means they’re kind of like friends or family members, and they have a very special relationship, so they get to call each other by the same name, A, but sometimes they’ll call each other the other guy’s name, too, so it’s not just one-way, you know, calling out my name. So we’ve got this character here, and that’s our pen-pal letter “A.” Okay, there’s another way to put those two letters together in writing that’s a bit more formal, it’s called the “Umlaut.” So it looks like a lower-case “o,” and that’s how we
