In the context of mountain disaster protection. A team of scientists from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology (USA), in collaboration with the National Center for Geography and Space Research (Switzerland), simulated some possible scenarios of global climate change at the US test site in Alberta. The results are presented in an article published in Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences. Russia has begun developing a monitoring system for areas such as ice melt, snow cover, as well as water resources and glaciers. Employees of Russian and Chinese universities will conduct research on the introduction of a new method of milking cows using plant metabolites. In the northeast of Scotland, in the Arctic Ocean, a deep-sea ridge was discovered under the ocean floor, which caused significant climate changes on Earth several million years ago. Geologist Kim Smith of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill thinks there should be more glaciers on Earth. He noted that the relationship between snow cover and the amount of ice in the air would be "very strong". There are many natural resources on Earth that are somehow used by man on an industrial scale. However, as studies show, there are those in the world that no one suspects. From 500 million to a billion years ago, there were supercontinents on Earth. Now scientists are reconstructing the history of their existence on the basis of ancient fossils. It is believed that about 4 billion years ago our planet was similar to the Earth we know today. But when did tectonic plates form? How are they related to the weather on the planet? Why is the climate changing and what can be done to keep it stable? As part of the development of the Russian environmental policy strategy for the period up to 2020, the main directions for the development of the ecosystem were determined.
