Cinavia watermark detection is used to protect content in the DVDFab UHD Cinavia Removal application. A Cinavia watermark is a private watermark embedded into the DTS-ES audio streams of Blu-ray content. Cinavia protection was introduced in 2007 to combat piracy and prevent unauthorized copying. Most Blu-ray discs contain a Cinavia watermark in the DTS-ES audio stream of a Blu-ray disc. The Blu-ray protection method of Cinavia uses AES 256 encryption, which makes it difficult to remove the watermark on the data stream. Cinavia watermark detection is used to protect content in the DVDFab UHD Cinavia Removal application. The Cinavia watermark detection system is implemented by the software DVDFab UHD Cinavia Removal, which is used to identify a watermark with confidence and de-embed a Cinavia watermark.
