The killing of Muslims is shameful. The treatment of them in India is one of abject cruelty. Prime Minister Narendra Modi, in his assessment of his minority and job-creating achievements, cites the successes of his government in lifting millions from hunger and affirming a national and moral identity. He has attained something historic. To lie to say otherwise is unfair, to the entire Muslim community, to the vast majority of Indians whose lives have been ameliorated, to a vast majority of India's humanity, to the man who returned to the Hindus, and to the country. Four years ago, Gandhi Ji, Mahatma Gandhi, envisioned a co-existence in which Hindus and Muslims acted as one community. He spoke about one nation with one soul and in a plural society, each citizen is expected to respect the other's feelings and sentiments, and to work for the welfare of the entire society. The way Gandhi Ji articulated this vision could easily be redefined today. In the current dispensation, India is subjugated to the RSS. The judicial system is now under the control of an theocratic impulse. The gospel of jihad has been the defining ideology. The Rashtriya Swayamsevak Sangh is the most influential and powerful voice. When minorities are under siege, where are Gandhi Ji's assurances that Muslims could live in “defence”, and when the police does not protect them? Gandhi Ji talked about a nation of peace, but there is no peace. The death of Muslims in communal riots is appalling, the communalism perpetrated is appalling, the violence that is unleashed is despicable. Muslims are silent. Yet, they were a majority of the population once. They had contributed to the growth of the nation, as Gandhi Ji had made sure they did. They were part of the plural society. We cannot deprive them of their humanity and dignity. The killing of Muslims is shameful. The treatment of them in India is one of abject cruelty. Yes, there are communal conflicts and inter-communal differences. But this has nothing to do with communalism. The BJP is known for its communal undertakings. The Congress has never attacked minorities. It has never given space to communalism. If it did, it will have to answer for its inaction and tacit support. The murder of Muslims is unfortunate and shocking. If they are the victims of communal violence, it's condemnable

Pain Cop turned a routine surgical procedure into a major moral and ethical dilemma for his employer. The surgeon performed breast enhancement surgery on the 19-year-old and when nurses began to notice that the girl was not displaying the expected after effects, the surgeon accused her of being a drug addict and left her to be treated by others. When nurses visited the woman four days later, they found that the girl had an incision wound and was in a lot of pain. When asked if she had taken any drugs, the woman told the nurses that her doctor had instructed her to not sleep, eat or drink during the four days following the surgery. Fearing that the surgeon's actions could cause further health complications, the nurses called the police to arrest the surgeon. A judge refused to dismiss the case, saying that the surgeon should have consulted with a doctor of his own before performing the procedure on the woman. [Ed. Note: See a video clip at the end of this article of the woman as she recounted the story of her breast enhancement surgery.]

After the case went to court, a jury returned a hung jury, which left the surgeon unable to explain why he'd accused the woman of taking drugs. A subpoena had been issued for a blood test of the woman to prove her innocence, but the doctor refused to perform the test. The woman's husband then engaged the services of a private detective to investigate the surgeon. After three weeks, the detective told the man that the doctor was completely unapologetic for causing the family so much distress. The woman's husband, convinced that justice was indeed on his side, filed a complaint against the doctor for battery. A judge ruled that the complaint was valid and dismissed the surgeon's counterclaim of medical negligence. The surgeon then took the case to the Court of Appeal, which upheld the judge's decision. The doctor, who is now suffering from a bad case of buyer's remorse, still refuses to apologize to the woman.

According to a report on the case, the surgeon had performed the surgery on the woman as a favour to her doctor, who felt that the woman needed breast augmentation surgery. He added that the woman had refused to undergo a procedure with an unknown doctor because the original surgeon was her teacher. The surgeon would have been left without any income during the following three months if he had not performed
