3. Create a new document with a suitable size for the illustration and save it in your working files as a JPEG file. You may need to create a new file first if you're working on a web project. Your new image needs to be larger than the original illustration. Adjust the width and height in the Properties Bar. Check the resolution in the bottom-right corner of the Properties Bar, as shown in Figure 9-2. You can use several other editing tools to resample (scale) your image. To do so, open the Edit menu and select Image Size, or press the Ctrl+O key combination. In the Image Size dialog box, shown in Figure 9-3, you can select among several options for resizing. You can resize your image to make it larger. If you want to make it smaller, select the Fit option. Figure 9-2: To make your resized image larger, increase the width and height in the Properties Bar. Figure 9-3: Resize your image using the Image Size dialog box. You can use these same features for resizing web images to fit their space. You can also apply special effects and other techniques by opening the Image Editing Options dialog box and choosing a different one of the various effects that you see in the Effects window. You can create special effects in the Effects window by using layer masks. You can then view the individual layers of your image to see how the mask works and to edit the layers if necessary. 4. Add a white rectangle to the new document. Add a white rectangle on top of the illustration that you'll use as a guide. The position of the rectangle is determined by the arrowheads in the Properties Bar. When you move one of these arrows, the small dotted line shifts to reflect that new placement. If you work on a web page, the white rectangle is important to use. When an element is covered by a background image or gradient, it's very important to have a white area that is the size of the element's space available. If you remove part of the element and then try to remove the transparent white area around it, the effect isn't as good as if you have a solid background. 5. Fill the white rectangle with a solid color. Create a new layer and then select the Solid color paint bucket. Fill the rectangle with a solid color that's appropriate for the

Q: Process Builder - Referencing an External Object I'm trying to reference an external object that I've created using Process Builder from a trigger. I created this external object manually in Developer Studio. It's not a custom object so the id is 13, but I needed this to be an opportunity of another custom object so the id was 90. I then edited the Process Builder to look like this AND(ProcessInstance.DeveloperName =: myEntityObject.DeveloperName, Field(code__c) = :myField, Field(name__c) = :nameString) I'm getting a "invalid field lookup" error, but it's important to know that the reference is working because if I take out the field lookup, I get no records, and if I leave it, I get the records that I want. The only problem is that the field lookup fails. What am I missing? Is there something I need to add to the Process Builder definition to make it work? A: I ended up adding in the following line, and now it works: System.runAs(myEntityObject.get(Id).get("User_ID__c")) This looks up the User_ID__c field on the referenced object. I had to do this because the system user isn't allowed to create a process. It still needs a user to finish the process. I don't know why it wasn't working but this is how it ended up working. RENTON, Wash. -- Seattle Seahawks cornerback Richard Sherman was not happy with a Pro Bowl selection brought about by his four interceptions Sunday in the NFC championship game. His comment was directed at the one he didn't play in -- the one that was one of the best parts of his performance. It came in the locker room after he and Seattle's defense returned to the Carroll Stadium locker room. It was similar to an apology Sherman and fellow Seahawks cornerback Walter Thurmond made after the Seahawks' 24-22 victory. But there was more to it. "You guys are going to make a fool out of me? I've played this week all year," Sherman told reporters. "I was going to get it anyway because I play the position. I've played well throughout the season. You guys, you made fun of me, you took the credit away from

Loss of heterozygosity in the retinoblastoma (RB) gene at 13q14 was studied in 7 adenocarcinomas and 11 gastric carcinomas, 5 liver carcinomas, 2 colon cancers, 5 leiomyomas, and 7 leiomyosarcomas. Loss of heterozygosity was observed in all cases of adenocarcinomas and in more than 50% of gastric carcinomas. It was detected only in one case of liver carcinoma, one of colon cancer, and one leiomyoma. These results support the previous hypothesis that loss of heterozygosity in the RB gene plays an important role in the development of a variety of adenocarcinomas, including gastric carcinoma, liver carcinoma, and leiomyosarcoma. Inactivation of the remaining allele of the RB gene in adenocarcinomas may have led to the development of gastric carcinoma, liver carcinoma, and leiomyosarcoma.Cohigar John Cohigar John was a Kenyan journalist, mainly known for his tenure as editor of the Nation.
