lacks the advanced tools and features of Photoshop and Photoshop CC, but many of the tools in Photoshop Elements are powerful enough for most people. Photoshop Elements Learn more about the free version of Photoshop Elements Photoshop Elements is a free version of the original Photoshop software. It has been reorganized into a smaller and simpler program that doesn't have all the tools of Photoshop CC and the CS versions of the software. You can use Photoshop Elements to edit and create new high-quality images. Photoshop Elements is easier to use for beginners and hobbyists. You get most of the features that make the professional version of Photoshop so popular, but in a more simplified version. Its main feature is the right-click menu for selecting different actions and special effects. The menu includes choices for editing and creating new images, sharing and printing them. Photoshop Elements doesn't have all the features of Photoshop CC, but it has enough features to satisfy most users. Photoshop Elements doesn't have the tools for advanced photo editing, complex effects or help for more experienced Photoshop users. Cape Institute The Cape Institute (TCI) is a non-governmental organisation based in Cape Town that was formed in 2012. Its goal is to increase democracy and political participation, and its stated objective is "to contribute to the construction of a society that is better governed, more just and more responsible". It comprises eight central organisations, including the electoral reform consortium (www.electoralreform.org.za), the SA Political Parties Conference (SAPPC), the South African Institute of International Affairs (SAII) and the South African Institute of Traditional Affairs. It also has over 100 member organisations. The Cape Institute's stated mission is to take South African democracy to the next level, and its core values are equality, mutual responsibility and respect for others. It is a registered charity and is a member of The Global Partnership for Effective Democracy. The Cape Institute is currently based in the Cape Town Central Business District (Pretoria Street). History A democracy institution The Cape Institute was founded in November 2012 as the Democracy Development Institute (DDI). At the time, the then Freedom Front Plus MP, Andries Nel had initiated an inquiry into the organisation's formation after the DDI was not registered under the Non-Profit Organisations Act. The Cape Institute described itself as a "non-partisan, non-party-political and non-denominational organisation committed to working towards the development of South Africa as a democratic, just and responsible society". Change of name In August 2013, the organisation announced its intention to rename itself as the

Cape Institute due to the fact that it was helping to increase public awareness about "a global agenda of building Democracy". The formation of the Cape Institute was motivated by the September 2012 conviction and sentencing of the former head of the South African Revenue Service Tom Moyane. Moyane, who was then the deputy minister of finance, was acquitted of corruption in 2015 on appeal, and sentenced to 18 months' house arrest for corruption in July 2014. The Cape Institute was an early critic of the decision of South African President Jacob Zuma, who was then the Minister of Finance, to freeze the assets of eight former government ministers and Zuma's personal business associates. The Cape Institute's stated aim was to encourage South Africans to participate in the political process, and to "use (their) voice(s) to ensure the highest standards of governance, integrity and responsibility."
