A simple and rapid method for the detection of blood in white wines by reversed-phase liquid chromatography with diode array detection. A method based on reversed-phase liquid chromatography with UV detection was developed for the detection of blood residues in white wines. The blood staining was immobilized by the addition of blood cells, washed off with water, and then detected by liquid chromatography (methanol as the organic modifier and acetonitrile as the aqueous modifier). Several white wines obtained from different grape varieties (Sauvignon blanc, Chardonnay, Pinot grigio, Riesling, and Malvasia) were tested. The method is validated and the detection limit of 0.16 microL of blood staining per 10 L of white wine is reported.
